PREFACE.

THE antient and authentick record of Domeſday Book having been univerſally eſteemed the foundation of Engliſh property, the origin from whence Antiquaries have commenced their enquiries, and beyond which it is almoſt uſeleſs for them to ſearch; the following extract is now offered to the Public, chiefly with the view of encouraging and promoting a general Hiſtory of Wiltſhire; ſuch an extract being the groundwork on which all our provincial Hiſtories muſt be erected.

Though the labour of tranſcribing and tranſlating the original text was of the dulleſt nature, yet the Editor chearfully entered upon the taſk, with a full conviction of it's utility, and with the pleaſing expectation that he may, in conſequence of it, ſoon ſee a Hiſtory of his native County.

How far the Editor has ſucceeded in his attempt to apply the modern names to the antient, muſt be left to the judgment of his readers. He, by no means, conſiders the ſcheme perfect, though he has ſpared neither pains nor enquiries to render it ſo. The difficulties of forming an Index, of this kind, were greatly enhanced by the circumſtance of the Hundreds of this County being omitted in Domeſday. For, unfortunately, the Manors and Eſtates in Wiltſhire are not therein arranged under their reſpective Hundreds, as they are in many other Counties, and, therefore, it was ſometimes neceſſary for the Editor, to ſearch the county at large, for a ſynonymous appellation, when, if the place had been allotted to it's proper Hundred, the deſcription alone might have immediately led him to it's certain diſcovery.

The names of Winterbourn, Clive, Langford, &c. &c. ſo frequently occur in Domeſday, and are ſtill ſo frequently found in various parts of this County, that it would be incumbent on an Editor to be intimately acquainted with the actual ſurvey of every pariſh, and even of it's partial diviſions, before he could pretend to apply ſuch names, with preciſion, to their reſpective ſituations. But this difficulty may, in a great meaſure, be remedied with the aſſiſtance of the preſent proprietors, who, by ſolely confining their enquiries to their particular eſtates, may, with ſome degree of certainty aſſign the deſcriptions to their original diſtricts. The general deſcription will often be ſufficient for that purpoſe, but when the circumſtance of a neighbouring Wood, or of a Church, is annexed to it, the application may be made with tolerable accuracy.

As it may be acceptable, and even neceſſary to ſome of my readers to be informed of the explanation of certain words in Domeſday, I ſhall endeavour to explain thoſe, that conſtantly occur in each ſection of the Book, and that, now, are either obſolete, or are only to be found in our Gloſſaries. And even the Gloſſaries give ſuch various interpretations of them, particularly with reſpect to their meaſurement, that I muſt aſſume the liberty of adopting thoſe only that may be moſt conſonant with my own ideas. However, I ſhall not attempt to advance any conſtruction, that may not be warranted by ſome authority, though I ſhall not trouble the reader with citing the opinion of Littleton, Skinner, Spelman, or other Antiquaries on the occaſion.

The firſt word that occurs in every deſcription, is Hida. All our old Antiquaries, hitherto, have uniformly agreed that Hida and Carucata are ſynonymous terms: that Hida was the Saxon appellation for a certain and fixed number of acres, and that Carucata was the Norman. But this definition will, by no means, agree with the following extract, for though Hida and Carucata are both mentioned in almoſt every article, it ſeldom happens that they ever perfectly accord; and, ſometimes, they ſo very widely differ, that no ingenuity of argument can poſſibly reconcile them to even the appearance of the ſame ſtandard. I ſhall, therefore, notwithſtanding ſuch high authorities, though with due deference to them, conſider Hida as the valuation of the eſtate, and Carucata as the meaſurement of the land. In the ſame manner, as we now ſay, that the modern Land tax is at ſo many ſhillings in the pound, according to the rent or value of the eſtate; ſo, formerly, the antient Danegeld (which was alſo a Land tax) was an aſſeſſment at ſo many ſhillings by the Hide.

I ſhall only produce one proof among many, from the Book of Domeſday itſelf, that this muſt be the proper diſtinction between Hida and Carucata, where a particular eſtate conſiſted of the meaſurement of four carucates, and yet was aſſeſſed at four hides in the time of the Confeſſor, but which four carucates was reduced to the aſſeſſment of two Hides at the time of the Conqueror's ſurvey.

Domeſday, Fol. 137, N° 19. Robertus de Olgi, et Radulfus Baſſet de eo tenet Theiſecote. Pro quatuor hidis ſe defendebat T. R. E. Et modo pro duabus. Terra eſt 4 carucatæ.

With this conſtruction the Sections in Domeſday will be intelligible, but, without it, no ſenſe could be extracted from them, and the whole would be contradiction and confuſion.

I ſhall therefore make no ſcruple to define Hida to be an uncertain portion of land, that might annually be worth about twenty Norman ſhillings: and as the value depended upon the quality of the land, it conſiſted accordingly of a greater or leſs number of acres, in proportion to their poverty or fertility.

An objection may ariſe to this definition, that the value of the eſtate doth not always agree with the aſſeſſments, neither in the time of Edward the Confeſſor, nor in that of William the Conqueror. But to this I anſwer, that the aſſeſſments were made prior to either of their times (for the origin of Danegeld is of a more antient date than even the Confeſſor's reign), and many of them might not have been altered, though the Lands had been either improved or depreciated in their value. And this ſeems to be the caſe, for it appears, that no new general aſſeſſment was made by William, though many of the lands are valued at a much higher rate in his ſurvey, than they were in the reign of his predeceſſor. A ſimilar inſtance occurs in the preſent Land tax, where the original aſſeſſment of the laſt Century ſtill continues, though the rents of the eſtates are indiſputably improved, at leaſt a fourth part, ſince the commencement of the tax.

Carucata is a Ploughland, which latter word is ſtill, I believe, ſometimes to be found in this county. The modern term, as well as the antient, applies to arable land only. The meaſurement of the Carucata is ſomewhat arbitrary, and differs conſiderably, not only in different Counties, but even in the different diſtricts of the ſame County. In ſome pariſhes, it is no more than 100 acres, while in others it may be 140. I ſhall therefore take it upon an average at 120. But where the term Ploughland is ſtill uſed, it may naturally be conſidered as the original Carucata, and, conſequently, at leaſt in the pariſh uſing the term, it's juſt meaſurement may be aſcertained.

Virgata is a Yardland, and conſiſts of 25 to 35 acres, being the fourth part of a Carucata. As the Yardland is in very common uſe throughout this County, the the meaſurement of the old Virgata may eaſily be fixed in the different manors, and by a multiplication of 4, that of the Carucata may alſo be known.

Bovata is an Oxgang, and is the half of a Yardland, and the eighth part of a ploughland. It muſt be obſerved, that, whenever any of the foregoing terms occur, they all relate to arable lands.

I ſhall now proceed to the Holders of the various parts of the Manor. The Lord himſelf kept the dominium, or demeſne, in his own hands, which was overlooked by the Servi, or Servants, who were actually annexed to the Manor, and were conſidered as a portion of it.

The other parts were allotted to the Villani, Bordarii, Coliberti, Coſcez, and Cotarii, who, on account of the lands which were aſſigned to them, were obliged by their tenures to perform the various offices which the demeſne lands required.

Money being exceedingly ſcarce at that period, no rents in money could be expected from the lands, and the profits, accruing from them to the Lord, were the ſimple produce of the demeſne, which he might either conſume at the Manor Houſe, or otherwiſe diſpoſe of, according to his inclination. The Mills, however, ſeem to be an exception to this rule, as an annual rent was paid for them to the Lord. The profits, arising from the Mills, must have been certain and considerable, as their rents, generally, appear to be, beyond all proportion, higher than the value of the other parts of the estate. Perhaps, the Tolls of the Mills, and the general necessity of bread, of which their could be no fear of a sale, made the payment of money easy.

The Villani, who were the originals of our present Copyholders, held their lands by doing the services of husbandry on their Lord's demesne, which were, in after times, commuted for what is now called a Quit rent. The word Villain being, at this time, always understood in an ill sense, I shall, on that account, use in the translation Villager, instead of it.

The Bordarii were also holders of land by particular services, though it is not precisely known what those services were. The name, indeed, seems to indicate an obligation to supply the Lord with provisions of some kind or other.

The Coliberti are supposed to be fishermen, and were, probably, obliged to provide fish for the Lord's table: and, I think, this land holder is never mentioned, but in those manors wherein is a river.*

Coscez

* I have found reason, since the printing part of the following sheets, to retract my opinion with respect to the interpretation of Coliberti;

Coſcez and Cotarii have been conſidered by our Antiquaries as ſynonymous terms, who define them to be Cottagers, occupying ſmall quantities of land, the poſſeſſion of which required them to ſupply the Lord with poultry, eggs, and other menial proviſions. But, that there was ſome diſtinction between the Coſcez and Cotarii will be clearly viſible from the following extract, in which they are ſometimes diſtinguiſhed with as much preciſion, as the Villani and Bordarii. It may appear, at the firſt ſight, that one of theſe words might denote the Cottage, and the other the Cottager; this, indeed, will not agree with the text: but as I cannot pretend to mark out the difference between them, I muſt be contented, with the authority of our Gloſſaries, to claſs the Coſcez and Cotarii under one and the ſame name of Cottager.

The

Coliberti; for, on re-peruſing them, I have obſerved that Coliberti are noticed among other holders in ſome manors, where no appearances of a river ever exiſted. I muſt therefore beg the reader to ſubſtitute the the word Freedmen, for Fiſhermen, whenever the latter occurs in the tranſlation, as I now conceive that Coliberti may be underſtood in the ſenſe, that ſuch holders might have been freed from their ſervitude by their Lords, but on ſome certain conditions, that might diſtinguiſh them from the Liberi, or real Freemen.

The Meadows, the Paſture, the Woods, and the Vineyards, are deſcribed in Domeſday by terms, different from thoſe of the arable land. The moſt comprehenſive word that we meet with, is Leuca, which, from comparing the various opinions of our Etymologiſts, I am inclined to interpret a mile and a half.

Quarantena is a furlong, twelve of which compoſe a Leuca, and this circumſtance ſeems to corroborate the opinion that Leuca is a mile and a half.

Arpenna, the meaſure of which is not decidedly known, is generally applied to Vineyards, and perhaps may be ſomething leſs than an acre.

The diſtinction between Meadow and Paſture, in Domeſday, is, that Meadow is appropriated to thoſe graſs grounds that were mowed, and Paſture to thoſe which were fed.

Having thus attempted to explain the different terms mentioned in a ſection of Domeſday, it may be thought incumbent upon me to ſay ſomething with reſpect to the concluſion of each article, wherein is eſtimated the annual value of the Manor. In order to underſtand this valuation properly, the reader muſt firſt know, that the Norman pound was actually a pound weight of ſilver, and that it was divided into 20 (perhaps nominal) nominal) ſhillings; each ſhilling being equal in weight to three of our preſent ſhillings, as was the Norman pound equal in weight to three of our modern pounds. Therefore, to make the value of the lands perfectly intelligible, we muſt multiply the antient valuation by three, by which the money of thoſe days will be nearly brought to the ſame ſterling ſtandard, as the preſent coin.

We muſt next proceed to aſcertain, as well as we are able, the proportionate value that money bore at that diſtant period, to what it does at the preſent inſtant: though, I am afraid, to do this with any degree of accuracy, will be attended with almoſt inſuperable difficulties.

The uſual method of making this eſtimate, has generally been, to form a compariſon between the the prices of wheat at the two periods. But this muſt be exceedingly fallacious, as nothing fluctuated ſo much, in thoſe early times, as the value of corn. We ſometimes find the price of wheat, by the load, under ten ſhillings (of the preſent ſtandard), and, perhaps, in the following year at the enormous price of twenty pounds, and in the next ſeaſon again reduced to leſs than ten ſhillings.—When the difference of the value of money is conſidered, the ſum of 20l. for a load of wheat muſt appear incredible, and if the concurrent teſtimony of all the Hiſtorians of thoſe times did not agree in ſuch a fact, we might even doubt the poſſibility of it.

It is no part of my plan to explain the cauſes of theſe extraordinary variations; though thoſe, who are converſant in the early hiſtory of this kingdom, will, probably attribute them to the imperfect ſkill of our anceſtors in huſbandry, to their little preſcience in guarding againſt the inclemencies of ſeaſons, to their improvidence in diſpoſing of their corn at the firſt opportunity, and chiefly, perhaps, to the turbulence of their times, when property had, ſcarcely, any other ſecurity than the perſonal ſtrength of it's poſſeſſor. It is enough for me to have proved, that the difference in the value of money is not to be diſcovered by the comparative prices of wheat.

The price of cattle will neither aſſiſt us much in the preſent ſpeculation; for though this was not in ſo fluctuating a ſtate as that of corn, (owing, perhaps, to the little art which was neceſſary to produce and rear them) yet we cannot rely on the difference of value between a fat ox at the time of the Conqueſt, and a fat ox of our own times: It was then valued at about ſeven or eight ſhillings (of our preſent ſtandard), which would carry the difference of the value of money greatly greatly beyond my eſtimation of it, and greatly beyond the truth. I muſt, however, obſerve that the breed of cattle is conſiderably enlarged, and, probably, a fat ox, formerly, might not have half the quantity of meat, as a common ox now has. But even this reduction will not be ſufficiently low for my eſtimate, though it may, in ſome degree, render it probable, when we advert that meat has been advanced in price, in a greater proportion than any other article.

If any circumſtance could tend to bring this ſubject to a demonſtration, it would be the price of labour, which, we may naturally ſuppoſe, muſt have been at all times ſufficient for the daily ſupport of the labourer. But as labourers for hire were unknown at the time of the ſurvey; we muſt advance ſomewhat forward in the Engliſh Hiſtory, before we can make any diſcovery of that nature. The earlieſt authentick account, that I have been able to meet with, of the ſettled price of labour, is to be ſeen in Fleetwood's Chronicon precioſum, p. 129; where, in the year 1351, the daily pay of a labourer appears to have been legally fixed at one penny and a halfpenny, or nine pence by the week, which, regulated by our preſent ſtandard, would be one ſhilling and ten pence. Now, I think a fair concluſion may be made, that in the ſpace of near 300 years, the price price of labour might be doubled, and, conſequently, that labour might have been worth, at the time of the ſurvey, eleven pence of our money by the week.

If we can thus diſcover the proportion between the price of labour at that period, and at the preſent, we may, probably, not be far from ſolving the queſtion. I ſhall take it for granted, that the general price of labour is now ſeven ſhillings a week, and therefore, as eleven pence is to ſeven ſhillings, ſo will be the difference of the value of money, between the time of the ſurvey, and the preſent period. It will appear, by this calculation, that the difference is ſomething more than ſeven and a half, and that we muſt multiply the valuations in Domeſday by twenty-two and a half (the pounds in Domeſday being equal in weight to three ſterling pounds) before we can pretend to form any judgment of the value affixed to the eſtates deſcribed in that book.

I am aware, that the value, thus multiplied, will be far from being adequate to the preſent rents of the eſtates; though, perhaps, if no improvements of any kind had been made in huſbandry, and the original erroneous mode of cultivation had been implicitly continued, it might not have been greatly wide of the truth, truth, even at this day. But I ſhall, preſently, enter a little more largely on this ſubject.

As I have quoted Fleetwood on the ſubject of a labourer's pay in 1351, I muſt take ſome notice of an inference which he draws from Ingulphus (who wrote in the time of the Conqueror), and which implies a contradiction to the quotation above mentioned. The inference is, that the daily pay at the time of the Conqueror was three halfpence, which was equal to four pence halfpenny of our money.

He ſays, at page 124 of the Chronicon, from Ingulphus, "that all the men of Croyland, who will have "any turf out of the Abbot's marſh, muſt either work "a day's work, or give three halfpence for one to cut "turves for Croyland Court." This would render the ſmall pay of 1351 incredible: but the paſſage ſeems to be careleſsly underſtood by Fleetwood, for it appears in the original, that theſe three halfpences were a fine or penalty upon the Tenants of the Abbey, for non-performance of their duty, and not a compoſition for others to do it for them; and, probably, the fine was ſo heavy, that it was ſeldom or never incurred. Beſides, the Abbot himſelf was to receive two thirds of it, and the other part was allotted to increaſe the maintenance of the Chaplains of the Monks. This proves that the money could not be appropriated for the pay of another.

It is probable, that the knowledge of agriculture remained ſtationary till the reign of Henry the eighth, or perhaps of Queen Elizabeth (at the latter end of whoſe reign money was brought to the ſame ſtandard as at preſent), and that, conſequently, the value of the manors continued of the ſame eſtimation from the time of Domeſday to that period, a proper allowance being only made for the increaſing plenty of money. In the ſixteenth century, the improvement of lands began to be ſtudied, but the progreſs of improvement was extremely ſlow, and we may aſſert, that it did not arrive to any conſiderable degree of perfection, till the reſtoration of Charles the ſecond; ſince which æra, the converſion of paſture lands into meadows, by the means of draining and drowning; a ſuperior ſkill in the management of woods; the profitable doctrine of manures; and, in later times, the univerſal introduction of artificial graſſes upon our arable lands, which are now ſcarcely ever in waſte, and which are even enriched by their intermediate produce—have improved the eſtates in ſo wonderful a manner, that we may ſafely aſſert, that the preſent produce ariſing from them, and conſequently their intrinſic value, has been, at leaſt, trebled, ſince the commencement of the laſt century, in this kingdom, even though we ſhould ſuppoſe no variation in the value of money; and that the tenants, though their rents have increaſed in the ſame proportion, have, notwithſtanding, much better bargains at this time; live more comfortably; acquire more profits, and even pay their rents better, than they did at any prior period.

I ſhall endeavour to illuſtrate this aſſertion, by extracting a particular manor from Domeſday; and, as I ſhall eſtimate the meaſures and the preſent value of it, by the rules above adopted, they will, if they ſhould be well founded, not only aſcertain the modern worth of the manor, but will alſo prove the preciſion, with which the ſurveyors, employed by William the Conqueror, executed their commiſſions.

I ſhall extract for this purpoſe, the manor of Odſtock, near Saliſbury, now the property of the Earl of Radnor; becauſe, till within theſe four years (ſince which time a bill for incloſing the manor has paſſed) it probably exhibited the ſame appearances, as it did at the original ſurvey, and could not, from it's local ſituation be otherwiſe benefited, except by the advantages it has received from an improved huſbandry, and from the converſion of a conſiderable part of it's paſture into meadow.

It may be neceſſary, however, before I proceed, to remind the reader of my proceſs in multiplying the original values, by ſo high a number as 67 and a half. The Domeſday ſhillings and pounds are firſt multiplied by three, which will reduce the antient money to the preſent weight. The ſum is then multiplied by ſeven and a half, to make it accord with the modern value of gold and ſilver. And to this I add another multiplication by three, becauſe I ſuppoſe that the real and intrinſic value of the lands is, at this time, actually three times as much as formerly, without any conſideration of the plenty or ſcarcity of money.

See N° 67, ſect. 9.

" Brictric holds Odſtock. His father poſſeſſed it " in the time of the Confeſſor, and it was then aſſeſſed " at 12 hides. The manor contains 720 acres of ara- " ble land; 120 acres of which, with 3 ſervants, are " in demeſne. Nine villagers and 16 cottagers oc- " cupy 300 acres. The mill lets for 25l. 6s. 3d. " Here are alſo 40 acres of meadow. The paſture is " a mile and a half in length, and 3 furlongs in " breadth, and there are 5 other acres of paſture, at " ſome diſtance from the above. The wood is 3 fur- " longs

" longs ſquare. A burgage in Wilton pays to the " manor 3l. 7s. 6d. The whole manor is worth " annually 675l."

Having hinted, at the beginning of this preface, that the purport of the following publication was intended as an introductory prelude to a Hiſtory of this County; I am induced, though with the greateſt diffidence, to offer a ſketch, or general outline, for the completion of ſuch a work.

It is well known, that Provincial Hiſtories have been, oftentimes, checked or retarded by the conſideration of the great labour, and of the heavy expence, that would neceſſarily attend them. Few people can be expected to engage in an operation, the trouble and expences of which would be certain, and the termination of which could ſcarcely be hoped for, during the exiſtence of a ſingle life. And where ſhall we find a man, whoſe abilities and circumſtances might enable him, ſingly, to perſevere in ſo complicated an undertaking? If a man of proper abilities ſhould venture upon the work, and depend upon a common ſubſcription to ſupport it's expences, it is much to be apprehended, that few people would riſque their ſubſcriptions, on the precarious uncertainty of ever ſeeing the Hiſtory; particularly, as it would not only depend upon the honeſty and induſtry of the undertaker, but would alſo be liable to a total miſcarriage, by the intervention of death or illneſs, that might happen to him.

Theſe hazards would, in my opinion, be removed, or, at leaſt, greatly diminiſhed by the following plan.

A general ſubſcription to be opened, and no ſubſcription to be leſs than 25l.

Every ſubſcriber of 50l. to be entitled to one copy of the work, when publiſhed, and alſo to one copy for each other 50l. which he may chuſe to ſubſcribe. The profits ariſing from the publication, to be proportionably divided among all the ſubſcribers in general.

A Committee of five, or more, to have the ſole management and conduct of the work.

The ſubſcription money to be lodged in the hands of a banker, and to be drawn for, as occaſion may require, by the order of the Committee.

If any perſon ſhould wiſh to recede from the Committee, or ſhould, by any misfortune, be incapable of attending it; the remaining part of the Committee might elect another in his place. And as it does not ſeem neceſſary, that every committee man ſhould be a ſubſcriber (though, perhaps, the majority of them ought ought to be), ſome ingenious men might be admitted, to whom it might be inconvenient to ſubſcribe, and whoſe aſſiſtance would be very uſeful and deſireable. As ſoon as 1500l. or 2000l. ſhould be ſubſcribed, the Committee might immediately be choſen, either by the perſonal election, or by proxy, or by the recommendatory letters of the ſubſcribers.

The Committee, when appointed, might elect their ſecretary, and proceed upon the work; and as they would ſoon engage, each in their reſpective departments, the moſt able Hiſtorians, Antiquarians, Draughtſmen, Heralds, Botaniſts, Engravers, &c. &c.—it ſeems probable, that a Hiſtory of a County, which has hitherto been conſidered as the labour of twenty or thirty years, might eaſily be effected within the ſhort period of three or four.

And even this period might be ſhortened, if the Country Gentlemen could be perſuaded, liberally to communicate abſtracts of their antient deeds and papers, or, at leaſt, ſuffer the Committee to employ proper perſons to make ſuch extracts from them, as might be neceſſary towards the perfection of the work.

It has been juſtly complained of in other counties, that papers of the utmoſt conſequence to their hiſtories, have, with an uſeleſs precaution, been timidly with-

holden from public inſpection, under the futile idea that the titles of the proprietors might, by a free communication, be called in queſtion; but I have too good an opinion of my countrymen, to ſuppoſe them biaſſed by ſuch unmanly ſentiments, and am rather inclined to think, that every proprietor will willingly and joyfully contribute to the full completion of a work, in which every individual will be partly concerned.

Every one muſt naturally wiſh to ſee the hiſtory of his property traced to it's original holder, and no one would bluſh to know, that his preſent eſtate was, antiently, part of the poſſeſſions of the principal men in this kingdom.

It may, perhaps, be neceſſary to hint at the propriety, that the drawing and engraving of all private buildings ſhould be executed at the expence of their owners; but that public edifices, remarkable ruins, and curious churches or monuments, ſhould be inſerted in the work at the expence of the Committee. And it is to be hoped, that thoſe Noblemen and Gentlemen, who might wiſh to have their ſeats introduced, may take the recommendation of their Draughtſman and Engraver from the Committee, that proper juſtice may be done to their places, and that the

the engravings may be a real ornament to the hiſtory.

If the general ſubſcription ſhould fall ſhort of my expectation, which I can ſcarcely ſuppoſe, an open and common ſubſcription might be propoſed for the work, as ſoon as the number and value of the volumes can be known, and before any expences, attending the preſs, have been incurred; the certainty of this future ſupply may enable the Committee to proceed in the Hiſtory, even under the diſadvantage of a preſent deficiency.

I ſhall only add, that the Editor of this volume will gladly contribute one hundred pounds, either in ſupport of this plan, or of any other that may be better approved of by the County.

N. B. The original names are to be found in the firſt column, and the modern names in the ſecond.

The larger figures, in the reference, direct the reader to the Proprietors of the land; and the ſmaller figures, to the ſections of that number, in which the place is deſcribed.

As it may be in the power of many of his readers to correct the errors, or ſupply the deficiencies of the Index, the Editor hopes that, by their kind aſſiſtance, it may be made complete.

Where the Q is introduced before the modern name, it is to be underſtood, that the Editor is either doubtful whether the application is juſt, or whether the place is to be found in the County.

I. The Lands of the King.

1. The King holds Cauna. King Edward held it, and it was never aſſeſſed, and therefore it is unknown how many hides it may be worth. But there are 29 ploughlands; 8 of which and 8 ſervants are in demeſne. Thirty-ſeven villagers, 78 borderers, and 10 coliberts occupy the other 21 ploughlands. Forty-five burgeſſes and 7 mills pay 4 pounds, 12 ſhillings, and ſixpence. There are 50 acres of meadow, and the paſture is 3 miles in length, and a mile and a half in breadth. This town provides one night's entertainment for the King's houſhold, with it's uſual cuſtoms. Nigellus holds the church of this manor with 6 hides of land under the King, where are 5 ploughlands, 2 of which and 6 ſervants are in demeſne. Seven villagers, 2 borderers, and 11 cottagers occupy the other three. Here are 2 mills of the value of 20 ſhillings, and 25 burgeſſes pay 20 ſhillings.
